Training For Zero budget organic farming

Agriculture in India is the most ancient tradition and occupation. The methods of agriculture have been passed down generations and traditions well preserved over years. The crops are well tested and most suited for the soil and weather conditions prevalent in India. As a part of the Green Revolution, scientists developed new varieties of seeds which changed the way agriculture was carried on in India. To produce a good yield from these varieties of seeds and prevent pest attacks, chemical fertilizers for the soil and pesticides were introduced. The farmers were pressurized to not only buy these seeds but also invest in fertilizers and pesticides. For this, they had to take loans for the initial investment into the crop. The interest rates and all the expenditure further sucked the farmers into a cycle of debts. In several regions in India, farmers began to commit suicide as they felt trapped in debts.

To help farmers develop their crop and become economically self-reliant, the Art of Living Foundation organizes innovative agricultural workshops. They are trained to choose indigenous seeds and crops which are best suited to the local soil and climate. The farmers are further trained to develop, dry, preserve, store and pack seeds for use by other farmers as well. Villages allocate small plots for demonstration of methods of organic farming and seed development.

The four pillar's of ZBNF are :

- Jivamitra/Jivamrutha
- Bijamitra /Bijamrutha
- Acchadana- Mulching
- Whapsa –Moisture

We have trained about 700 small scale farmers in the year 2021 also monitored their further activities and cropping practices. About 256 hector land in the different villages of Kallamb taluka is registered for the certification of organic cropping practices.

Market availability is the main issue for the farmers their for we have established organic food mall at Andora Taluka Kallamb Dist. Osmanabad

Self employment trading for transgender

The Transgender community face many problems such as fear, shame, social discrimination, depression, suicidal tendencies and social stigma. They are unable to live a dignified life, once their gender status is revealed. Steps must be taken to create public awareness so that TGs feel that they are a part of society and are not treated as untouchables. The solution to their problems requires concerted efforts to mainstream them through adoption of an inclusive approach in all spheres of life.

Life line welfare society started this initiative of offering skill-based programs to the transgender community. The objective of this program is to bring the transgender community into the mainstream of society and provide them opportunities for self-employment. This project includes certification programs in Tailoring, Sanitary Pad making, beauty services, herbal products etc. The success of this project will be a great milestone in this mission to provide dignified livelihood to disadvantaged groups.

Seldom, our society realizes or cares to realize the trauma, agony and pain which the members of Transgender community undergo, nor appreciates the innate feelings of the members of the Transgender community, especially of those whose mind and body disown their biological sex. Our society often ridicules and abuses the Transgender community and in public places like railway stations, bus stands, schools, workplaces, malls, theatres, hospitals, they are sidelined and treated as untouchables, forgetting the fact that the moral failure lies in the society's unwillingness to contain or embrace different gender identities and expressions, a mindset which we have to change.

Within the transgender health literature, a small body of evidence has focused on negative and positive workplace experiences. Negative experiences (discrimination, micro-aggressions, lack of social support, structural inequalities, etc.) are associated with poor work outcomes and diminished well-being through maladaptive coping mechanisms. Yet, a variety of effective strategies (coping methods with strategies, such as identity-based, cognitive, interpersonal and advocacy-related ones) can be utilized to facilitate transitions at work or buffer the effects of discrimination as reported by transgender participants.

The , Lifeline Welfare Society organized and executed the said program successfully in active support with Ministry of social justice and empowerment Govt. of India, Ministry of Ayush Govt. of India , National institute of social defense, National Drug dependence treatment center AIIMS, Central council for research in Ayurveda and Siddha, Center council for research in Yoga and Naturopathy.
